FIVE INJURED BY BOILER EXPLOSION

Five residents of Colma were injured last Sunday evening at Salada Beach, when a boiler exploded as they sat around a camp fire they had built on the beach.

Those injured as a result of the explosion were Robert Callan, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Callan, of Werner street, who received a broken leg and severe burns; Miss Louise Silicani, daughter of Mr. Robert Silicani, of Daly City, burned about the face and slight bruises; Mrs. Sam Martinelli, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ballentini, of Briggs street, who was burned about the face; Raymond Silicani, eldest son of Mrs. Hans Neilsen and brother of Miss Geraldine Silicani, who was recently stabbed by an unidentifed assailant, was badly burned about the face, hands and arms, and suffered cuts about the forehead; Lester Ver Linden, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph E. Ver Linden, of Annie and Washington streets, burned about the face and body and other injuries, the exact extent of which has not as yet been determined.

Ray Silicani and Lester Ver Linden are confined to the South San Francisco hospital, under the care of Dr. Robert Steele Irvin and Dr. Lassard. Mrs. Martinelli and Robert Callan are being treated at the Mills Memorial hospital at San Mateo by Dr. Holmes Smith.

The group of campers, nearly all related, had picnicked on the beach during the day, where they had fished and enjoyed bathing and wading in the surf. In the early afternoon a delicious barbecued dinner had been enjoyed. The fire had been laid between two discarded hot water boilers, across which the picnickers had placed broiling irons.

Later in the afternoon, shortly after six of the group had left for Colma to buy additional food, the remaining five gathered around the boilers to prepare coffee and supper for friends who were expected to join them later in the evening, when without any warning a terrific explosion hurled them into the air.

Miss Ruth Womack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Womack, of Winchester street, became the bride of Mr. Richard L. Wall, of Vancouver, Canada, last Saturday evening at the Church of Christ, Jules avenue, San Francisco, Rev. Trice performing the ceremony.

Miss Hilda Asken was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Beulah Womack, sister of the bride, and Miss Marie Walker. The bride's little sister, Miss Doris Womack, was the flower girl. Mr. Leo Fink was the best man, and the ushers were the bride's brother, Mr. Raymond L. Womack, and uncle, Mr. Kenneth Messick. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. C. P. Womack.

The bride wore a gown of white ivory satin trimmed in silver and ivory lace and a crown of orange blossoms in her hair. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias. The gown worn by the maid of honor was of blue satin, trimmed in pink georgette and gold lace, and she carried pale pink roses. The bridesmaids wore gowns of taffeta with skirts of tulle flounces in old rose and shaded yellow to orange, carrying dark pink and yellow roses. The little flower girl's dress was of pale pink taffeta, trimmed in baby blue georgette, and she carried a basket of flowers in pastel shades.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion in pink and white sweet peas, and the bride and groom stood under a huge wedding bell held in place with a beautiful floral arch, making a very attractive setting.

Ater the ceremony over one hundred guests and relatives assembled at the home of friends in San Francisco, where a reception was held for the happy bride and groom, after which they left for a two weeks honeymoon trip, to be spent in Oregon.

YOUNG PEOPLE INVITE YOU TO THEIR SUNDAY SERVICES

The Young People of Calvary Baptist Mission invite you to come to the meeting Sunday evening at 6:45. These meetings are full of life and pep that only young people can create. Lively song service, musical numbers, expressions in talks that you will love to hear.

The topic for this week is "What Does the Church Ask of us." You will see how by your working and giving your time, talents, service and attendance that you will be aided both materially and spiritually, and possibly be aided in your daily work. Again you are invited with the assurance that you will be welcomed.

WOULD ABOLISH GRADE CROSSINGS

Meeting to consider the possibility of abolishing all grade crossings on the peninsula, representatives of three counties will hold a conference in Palo Alto on October 16.

The safety movement was launched by the Palo Alto city council at a recent session and the date for the conference was announced by Mayor C. H. Christensen of that city following a meeting with Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco.

Supervisors of San Mateo, Santa Clara and San Francisco counties, city councils along the peninsula, state officials and representatives of the Southern Pacific railroad and civic bodies will be invited to the Palo Alto meeting.

Under a plan being considered by Mayor Christensen, the state will underwrite the project and apportion the cost to the counties and cities involved and the Southern Pacific.

K. OF C. DANCE TO BE HELD ON SEPTEMBER FOURTEENTH

At their last regular meeting, on Tuesday evening, Daly City Council, K. of C., chose the following officers for the new term: Grand Knight, W. Manning; Deputy Grand Knight, A. Paramaisano; Chancelor, A. K. Irving; Warden, E. Cuneo; Treasurer, W. Sweeney, Jr.; Inside Guard, P. O'Connor; Outside Guard, W. Murphy; Trustees, W. Core, P. Benesini and A. Lee.

The Council will sponsor a get-together social dance an Saturday evening, September 14. This affair will be purely social and for the enjoyment of the members and friends. Everybody is urged to attend. There will be a small admisison charge of 25 cents. The parish hall of St. Maximus church and good music as well as a jolly crowd will no doubt make this dance a success, and if so, regular dates for dances will be scheduled.

CALVARY BAPTIST MISSION TO CELEBRATE RALLY DAY

Rally Day at Calvary Baptist Mission will be celebrated on Sunday, September 15. A unique program is being arranged that promises to attract the largest congregation in the history of Calvary. An original play, written by a member of the Mission, will be presented by the adult class. An invitation is extended to the general public to attend this service.

Calvary Mission has voted to enter the great Loyalty Crusade, soon to be launched, which includes the whole bay district. This crusade includes all the Protestant denominations of the entire bay region.

Roll Call Sunday is set for October 6. Every member of every church is expected to answer "Present," when their name is called on that day.

BRAZIL MISSIONARY TO TELL STORY

On Thursday evening, September 12, in the Grace Presbyterian church, Dr. Henry J. McCall, who spent 30 years in Brazil, will give an illustrated account of his exciting experiences. Dr. McCall is an unusually interesting speaker, and his humor keeps his audience in smiles all the evening. A beautiful set of colored slides will be shown, giving the audience a vivid idea of the life of a missionary in that vast unknown country. An offering will be taken to aid the great missionary causes of the church.

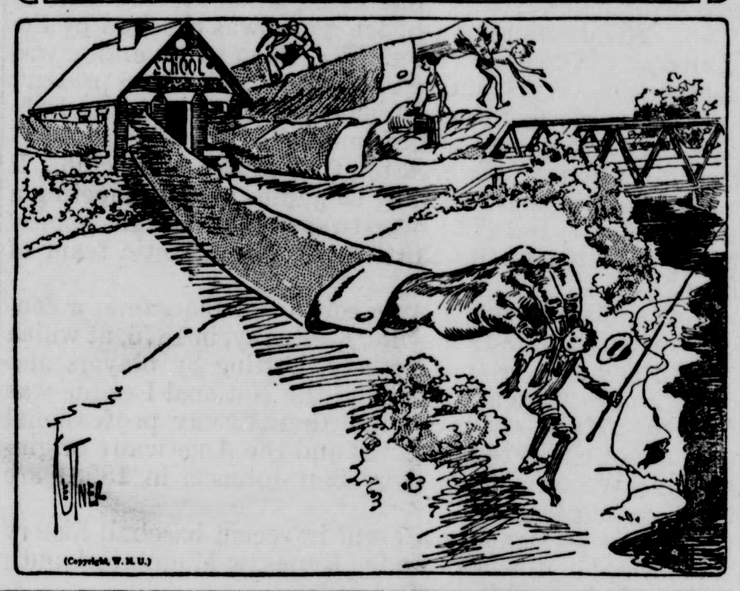
SAN MATEO COUNTY FILM TO ADVERTISE PENINSULA

Members of the Burlingame-San Mateo Kiwanis club at their noonday meeting last Tuesday viewed the two-reel San Mateo county film prepared by the San Mateo county chamber of commerce to advertise the beauties and advantages of the peninsula to the outside world. Rosco D. Wyatt, manager of the chamber, under whose direction the pictures were taken, supplemented the film with remarks regarding the circumstances under which the pictures were taken and advising the club of the wide publicity being given the county through this medium.

MOTHER OF ABONDONED CHILD NOW IN JAIL

Mildred Winters aged 20, mother of the four weeks old baby girl found abandoned in an East Oakland flower garden, and Eddie Pacheco, aged 22, of Redwood City, were taken to Oakland last Tuesday from Redwood City, where they had been arrested in a hotel. The young mother admitted abandonment after giving the child a heavy dose of ether to quiet it while she made her escape. The child will recover.

Time to Come Back



MAKE SCHOOL ZONES SAFE FOR CHILDREN

An appeal has been issued by Chief of Police Doyle to every motorist in this community to assist in making the school zones safe for children going to and from school.

"Each local officer has been instructed," states Chief Doyle, "to warn and assist motorists in being particularly careful while driving in school zones. They are further instructed to apprehend immediately any motorist who does not show proper precaution and care while driving through school zones.

"We realize that the first few weeks after the opening of school are dangerous, due to the fact that both children and drivers have become careless during the summer vacation months.

"The Safety Conference of the State Chamber of Commerce is carrying on a state-wide campaign this month to bring the need of carefulness to the attention of motorists during these first days of school. We are anxious that this city does its share."

WANT IMMIGRATION LAWS TIGHTENED

Declaring that the immigration restriction act of 1924 has utterly failed in its purpose because of lack of enforcement, and at the same time demanding that steps be taken to curb the Mexican influx into California, Clarence L. Kincaid, of Hollywood, newly elected state commander of the American Legion, has called officials of the World war veterans' organization together for a conference on the immigration question.

State Commander Kincaid has been in San Francisco conferring with State Adjutant James K. Fisk and others in high positions in the Legion relative to the movement started by the organization for the study of the Mexican and Filipino immigration question.

"We respectfully request the department of labor of California to at once make a study of the Mexican immigration subject before any concrete steps are taken in the matter of restricting or prohibiting such immigration," Commander Kincaid declares. "We want to know whether the Mexican immigration may be limited by quota, or otherwise, and whether or not it would be possible under the 1924 restrictive immigration act to eliminate any undesirable elements of this immigration," he says.

"We also desire that the state governmental agencies make a comprehensive survey of the Filipino immigration problem in California both as to its social and economic aspects, and to report to the governor of California its findings and any suggested action it may think necessary," Commander Kincaid declares.

"We shall urge the members of the California delegation in both houses of Congress to promptly enact legislation which will put teeth in the present immigration act, and to provide the necessary funds, legal machinery, procedure and personnel for the apprehension, punishment and deportation of violators of the restrictive immigration act and of those who aid in such violation," Commander Kincaid says.

Commander Kincaid will soon announce the names of his state committees which will make an independent study of the Mexican and Filipino problems.

"CREATED IN HIS IMAGE" GRACE PASTOR'S TOPIC

"Man, a glorious creation; a shattered destiny; and a restored dignity." This is Rev. John R. Stevenson's sermon for next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, in Grace Presbyterian church. The Sunday school is making preparations for Rally Day, which will be observed Sunday morning, October 6.

DARCY'S SPORT SHOP DEFEATS ALL STARS

A fast aggregation of baseball players, the Darcy's Sport Shop nine, defeated the Jefferson All Stars, 10 to 2, last Sunday at San Mateo.

C. Aiello and L. Kennedy were the only consistent hitters for the local nine. Charlie collected three bingles in four times at bat, and Lawrence garnered a brace of singles in three trips to the plate.

Gene Keagle started on the mound for the All Stars, but had to be removed in the fifth inning on account of an injury sustained while trying to make a put-out at first base. He allowed four hits and whiffed as many batters. Creighton finished the game and was touched for an equal number of safeties.

Kennedy was a tower of strength on the field. He made two sensational catches that brought cheers from the crowd, the first a long fly that was destined to be a home run, had he not backed up against the fence and snared it. A little later he robbed the same batter by catching a foul ball near the grandstand.

VETERANS DEFEAT MERCHANTS' TEAM

The Daly City Merchants traveled to Palo Alto last Sunday and were defeated by the Veterans' Base Hospital baseball team by the score of 11 to 2. The Hospital team's three hits and a couple of errors in the first inning gave the home team four runs and practically cinched the game. The Daly City boys tried hard to start rallies, but sensational catches by the Palo Alto outfield always stopped them short. They have a wonderful playing field, one of the best the Daly City boys have played on. It has two regulation dugouts for players, and is lined all around with benches, which were overcrowded with veterans from the different wards, about 500 in all. After the game the players were given a feed.

The Merchants made 8 hits, 2 runs and 4 errors; the Veterans, 15 hits, 11 runs and 1 error. The batteries were: Daly City, Randall and F. Strand; Veterans, Estes and Fischer.

THRONGS PAY TRIBUTE TO FORMER MAYOR

Hosts of friends and associates in civic and political life paid their last final tribute to the memory of Farmer Mayor Harry A. Totten at Burlingame last Tuesday.

Impressive funeral services were held at two o'clock last Tuesday at Burlingame Masonic temple under the auspices of Burlingame Lodge No. 400, Free and Accepted Masons. Humphrey L. Jones, worshipful master of the lodge, conducted the service. Masonic burial rites also were read at Cypress Lawn cemetery where interment took place.

Pallbearers who escorted the remains to their last final resting place were Walter Scott, Fletcher Cutler, Thomas Broderick, Joseph Langrell, Horace W. Amphlett and Hugh Keville.

TWO YOUTHS ARE INJURED IN FREAK ACCIDENTS

Injured in seperate freak accidents late Saturday near Redwood City, two San Mateo county youths are recovering from bullet wounds.

George Schroder, aged 13, of Foothill boulevard, Redwood City, received birdshot wounds in his legs when a shotgun carried by Ronald Gordon, aged 13, with whom he was hunting, caught against his clothing and was discharged accidentally.

S. A. Phillips, of San Antonio avenue, Menlo Park, was shot in the side when a bullet in some rubbish he was burning in a bonfire near his home exploded.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

California lives up to its name of "The Land of Wealth and Health," according to the annual report of the state insurance commissioner, recently made public. Records of premium and indemnity payments in the state during the past thirty years discloses that $1,002,340,386 has been collected by insurers and only $298,823,920 paid out.

Work on the $25,000 plant of the Western Metals Products Company has been started at South San Francisco. R. C. Stickle, South San Francisco builder, was recently awarded the contract for the buildings. On completion of the plant the company will engage in the manufacture of steel office furniture and like products.

Joel Olivera, of San Francisco, met death when "mangled by a train—accidental," according to a verdict of a coroner's jury at San Mateo. Olivera was killed instantly when hit by a passenger train as he was working on a railroad trestle at San Mateo on Wednesday of last week.

Three San Francisco motorcyclists, arrested by the Menlo Park police and charged with speeding, were sentenced to fifteen days in the county jail or $15 fine each. The three youths were cutting in and out of traffic when apprehended by the police.

There will be no change in the Burlingame tax rate for the coming year. The rate will remain $1.59, it has been decided by the council. A budget of $218,210 was adopted.

As a result of his automobile crashing into and overturning two Southern Pacific tank cars early Sunday morning at San Mateo, W. C. Wright, United States coast guard employe, is in a serious condition at Mills hospital. He has a chance to recover, however, physicians state.

Off to a final major allocation for Northern California highways before winter comes, the state division of highways on Monday announced call for bids on $2,256,400 worth of work during this month.

Discovery of a valuable gold nugget near the foot of Vernal falls is reported by John Bingaman, forest ranger. Rangers, however, do not anticipate a gold rush, [illegible] is prohibited in Yosemite N[illegible]ark.

The San Mateo high [illegible] was vacated in less than a minute during a fire drill called as a test.

Under a new state school law, effective in 1930, San Mateo county will lose three teacher units and a loss of $4,200 in rural supervision funds, but will gain $2,612 for the urban schools of the county.

Found guilty of petty theft by a jury in Superior Judge George H. Buck's court, John Benetti, of San Francisco, has begun serving a six months sentence in the county jail for having bilked Joe Peneto, a dishwasher in the Palace Hotel, out of $600 savings on December 19 last.

DE MOLAY THEATRE PARTY PROVES DECIDED SUCCESS

The theatre party given by the members of Crocker Chapter, Order of De Molay, last night at the State Theatre was a great success, being even far beyond the expectations of the De Molay boys, who, along with the management of the State Theatre, are to be congratulated on giving to the residents of Daly City such a splendid evening's entertainment. The program commenced with two feature pictures and a comedy shown on the screen, followed by the audience singing some of the old-time songs. Immediately after the singing, fifteen high class vaudeville acts were introduced by the master of ceremonies, all being very interesting, and it was near midnight when the program had been completed and the audience that completely filled the theatre went home, satisfied that it had been one of the best shows ever put on in this district.

S. P. SPUR HELD ROAD MENACE BY STATE AIDE

Safety of the occupants of as many as 20,000 automobiles a day would be menaced by the spur track the Southern Pacific railroad has started to build across the proposed Bayshore highway east of San Mateo. That picture of the situation was presented yesterday by Col. John H. Skeggs, district engineer of the state division of highways, as testimony in the Western Pacific's effort to enjoin completion of the spur track. The suit is being heard by United States District Judge William H. Hunt, as special master.

SUPERVISORS FIX COUNTY TAX RATE

An 18 cent reduction in the county tax rate for the coming fiscal year was made when the San Mateo county board of supervisors adopted the 1929-30 county budget last Tuesday at their regular meeting at Redwood City.

The new rate is $2.89 on every $100 of assessed valuation for unincorporated territory, and $2.49 on the $100 for inside territory. The net county valuation, upon which the budget is based, is $44,624,245.

The 1928-29 rate for outside property was $3.07, or 18 cents higher than that for the coming year.

The special road (outside) fund provided for in the tentative budget was eliminated at Tuesday's session. This reduced the rate 10 cents on the $100, or $940 from the tax levy.

Supervisors Rosalie M. Brown and John W. Poole voted against the special road fund, while Supervisors Thomas L. Hickey and Chairman C. V. Thompson voted for it. Supervisor Manuel Franciso was absent.

Supervisor Poole objected to having the cost of the new San Francisquito creek bridge coming out of his district road fund, but he was overruled by the votes of the other supervisors. Poole stated that the money, approximately $15,000, should come out of the general fund.

Following is the budget for the coming fiscal year:

	1929-30 Rate.	1929-30 Levy.

WOMAN MAY LOSE ARM AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Former Federal Circuit Judge W. H. Hunt escaped injury, while Mrs. Anna M. Harris, of San Francisco, suffered injuries to her left arm that will necessitate amputation, and her husband suffered minor injuries in an accident that occurred about 6 o'clock last Friday night on the Skyline boulevard near Colma.

Hurtling over a 100-foot embankment, turning over four times before lodging against heavy brush, the Harris automobile pinned Mrs. Harris beneath it, crushing her left arm. Harris was thrown clear of the car and suffered minor injuries, for which he was treated at the South San Francisco hospital.

Reports of the accident vary. Mr. and Mrs. Harris insist that Judge Hunt's car, driven by a chauffeur, crowded them from the road and thus caused the accident. Judge Hunt told police that the Harris car crashed into them, after Mrs. Harris, who was driving, had apparently lost control of the machine.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. HOLDS INITIAL MEETING

The first meeting of the General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association was held last Tuesday afternoon at the school, Mrs. Hassett's class winning the banner for having the most mothers present at the meeting.

Mrs. McNair was appointed corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Douglas hostess for the ensuing term.

From all indications the General Pershing P. T. A. will have a very busy term, as preparations are under way for a huge bazaar and entertainment to be held the early part of December, to which all Daddies are asked to come and enjoy the fun and good things to eat.

The regular afternoon whist party will be held in the school house on Wednesday afternoon, September 26, and a practice whist, to teach all members to play, will be held the second Friday of each month.

A check for $55, the amount realized at the last food sale, was drawn for the Dental Clinic and turned over to Mrs. Lohr.

SUMMONS

No. 16094.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo, and the complaint filed in the office of the County Clerk of said County.

In the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo.

ANGELO ARMANINO, Plaintiff, vs. HENRY E. LESZOZYNSKY, and also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto, Defendant.

The People of the State of California Send Greeting to: Henry E. Leszozynsky, and also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto, defendants.

The object of such action is to quiet title to the premises and real property in the complaint and in said action and hereinafter described, and to determine the claim, interest, estate, right, title and lien therein of said defendants and of each and any or all of them, adverse to said plaintiff, and to determine the said plaintiff's claim, interest, estate, right and title therein. The premises and real property affected in this suit are situated in the said County of San Mateo and are bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

BIG ATTRACTIONS AT DALY CITY THEATRE

Tomorrow will bring a first run showing of the new Tom Mix series from R. K. O. Pictures Corporation when Tom Mix in "Son of the Golden West" will be shown on the screen of the Daly City Theatre, together with an extra feature showing Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "All at Sea," a big laugh hit from the Metro Goldwyn Studios. There will be free candy for the kiddies at the matinee.

For Sunday, David Rollins and Nancy Drexal will be seen in the Fox comedy special, "Prep and Pep," while Snooky White and his merry comedians will be seen and heard on the stage.

Monday night is Silver Nite, and the screen attraction will be beautiful Billie Dove in "Adoration." There will be a special matinee Monday at 2 p. m.

Tuesday night will bring Al Jolson to the Daly City Theatre in a first run district showing of the Warner Brothers feature "The Jazz Singer."

Wednesday night is Country Store night at the Daly City Theatre, and the screen attraction will be "Sally's Shoulders," a big, snappy, pep and jazz story with Lois Wilson, Huntley Gordon and George Hackthorne in the cast of featured players.

Corinne Griffith will be the Thursday star when she appears in "Saturday's Children," Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer prize novel. On the same bill Charley Chase will appear in "Loud Soup."

Friday night is Silvernite, and the Daly City Theatre will present the first run showing of "Beware of Bachelors," a big, smashing comedy hit from the Warner Brothers studios.

"AFTER DARK" REVIVAL AT THE GEARY THEATRE

Sunday night, September 1, at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, the much heralded revival of "After Dark" was disclosed. Usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given during the limited engagement.

What with stories that a real bar with almost real beverages is about to be opened at the Geary as an atmospheric adjunct, a snorting, whistling, ringing locomotive parading the streets as a ballyhoo, advertising matter that harps back to bicycle days, interest in "After Dark" has reached a pitch that may well fill the heart of Dion Boucicault's shade with pride.

Playwrights of the Victorian era wrote when actors were cheap. A cast of less than twenty was considered an impossibility. In "After Dark" the author was particularly lavish in the way he spilt actors and actresses all over the scene.

Del Lawrence, long a fixture at the Wigwam and one of San Francisco's greatest stock favorites, will play Chandos Bellingham, alias Richard Knatchbull, as deep a dyed villain as ever poisoned a well or snitched on his bootlegger; Fanny Louise Carter, who will be remembered as leading woman at the Bush Street Theatre and later with T. Daniel Frawley at the Grand opera house, is in the cast. Edgar Beach, who plays Old Tom, was last seen here in support of Nance O'Neil and McKee Rankin.

ONE ON THE PROFESSOR

Who's the absent-minded one now?" said the professor as they left the church one rainy night. "You left your umbrella back there and, I not only remembered mine, but I brought yours too." And he produced them from his coat.

His wife gazed blankly at him.

"But," she said, "neither of us brought one to church."—U. P. Magazine.

ORIGIN OF BASEBALL

While baseball as we know it is a sport of comparatively recent development, a game in which a tossed ball was batted with a rude club has been traced back to the fourteenth century in Europe. The present American game was probably an outgrowth of "town ball," played in New England from about 1830, in which the runs were made around posts set in the ground, instead of bases.

The first code of baseball rules was formulated by the Knickerbocker Club of New York in 1845, the first match game was played the following year, and the first gate-money series of games took place at Hoboken in 1858. The development of the game was checked by the Civil war, but was revived in 1865, when a convention was held at which representatives of thirty clubs were present.

A Rockford, Illinois, team first employed regularly salaried players, but the Cincinnati Red Stockings, organized in 1868, is considered the first professional club. It made a tour in 1869, winning 69 games without meeting a single defeat. In 1870 it won twenty-nine straight games, being defeated in the thirtieth by the Atlantic team of Brooklyn.

Gamblers having gotten control of the game, a convention was held in Louisville, Kentucky, in 1876, at which strict rules to overcome bribery, betting by players and other abuses were adopted, and the National League was formed. There are now more than twenty professional leagues, of which the National and the American (originally the Western, formed by Ban Johnson in 1893) are the two "big leagues."

The most significant event in recent baseball history was the appointment of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as "baseball czar" in 1920.

HOUSEKEEPING IS FUN

With the drudgery of former days removed by means of mechanical appliances, scientific home-making today is real fun, says the household research bureau of Peoria, Illinois. For one thing, less labor is performed in the home than formerly, while on the other hand such home work as is still necessary is accomplished with a fraction of the physical effort the housewife was obliged to put forth in the past.

In two years the commercially made bread output has increased 12 per cent, while the broom output fell off 17 per cent as a result of the further inroads of vacuum cleaners. Production of needles and pins fell about 18 per cent, showing how ready-made garments have supplanted home sewing. Fifteen years ago there were only 50,000 electric washers in use, while at the end of 1929 will find 7,500,000 of them lightening American home labors.

These and many other interesting home facts have been compiled by the household research bureau, which is conducted for the study of women's social and economic problems. They show that with the aid of mechanical appliances, home-making may be made a real pleasure, and an occupation to challenge the interest and skill of the most gifted woman.

THE BEAUTY INDUSTRY

Women of America contributed approximately four hundred million dollars for all sorts of cosmetics during the past year, and in the opinion of J. J. Quinn, vice-president of Pinaud, Inc., this figure will reach a billion annually before long.

As has been the case with many leading American industries, the "beauty industry" has witnessed an evolution from luxury to necessity. Thus it has been with the automobile, the rado, the airplane.

"Today," Mr. Quinn declares, "the necessity of preserving feminine beauty is rooted in the fundamental welfare of the race—both psychologically and biologically—and a jar of facial cream or a compact are as essential to modern economy as the mixing bowl or sewing machine were to our grandmothers."

Be this as it may, the ladies appear to share in the view expressed and evidently feel that they are getting their money's worth. And whether the mere male admits it or not, the judicious use of beauty aids by the fair sex affords him many a pleasing eyeful.

TOO MUCH OIL

In spite of recent efforts on the part of producers, encouraged by the government, to devise means of limiting the output of crude oil, the flood of oil from hundreds of new wells has reached even higher peaks during the last few months.

The bringing to the surface of a vast quantity of oil beyond what is needed for immediate consumption is a wasteful procedure, it is claimed, which does great harm to producers without benefit to the public.

At first glance it might be thought that this overproduction would be to the consumer's advantage, through bringing about a reduction in the price of gasoline. This idea, however, is on the whole erroneous, as the cost of crude oil is only one item entering into the final cost of the finished product. Transportation, refining and marketing costs remain the same under practically all conditions, and the small saving in the price of crude oil at the wells is not sufficient to make any appreciable difference in the retail price.

Besides, the surplus oil has to be stored in expensive steel tanks and the carrying charges for holding it until needed is very great. It would be better for everybody concerned if the oil were left in its natural storage underground until it is actually required, it is contended.

Youngsters will probably pass along the news that a New York father dropped dead while spanking his son.

"LULU BELLE" COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE, SEPT. 9

"Lulu Belle," one of the greatest productions ever made by that wizard of the stage, David Belasco, will be presented at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a short engagement beginning Monday, September 9. This play, with all the great scenic effects used in the original production, will be as nearly like the New York production as it is possible to make it. There is a great cast of seventy-five players, among whom are singers, dancers and musicians, and headed by the talented young actress, Dorothy Burgess, whose success in the picture "In Old Arizona" has raised her to the front rank of screen and stage players.

The scenes of the play are laid in the sections of New York City inhabited by the negro portion of the population. The first act takes place in the poorer quarter known as San Juan Hill. Here we are introduced to the heroine of the story, "Lulu Belle," with her wiles and witchery. Later we are brought to the more aristocratic section of Harlem, where a cabaret, operated by negroes for the amusement of the white amusement seekers is in full blast. Finally we find ourselves in a luxurious boudoir in the Avenue Marigny, Paris, where Lulu Belle has become a noted vaudville star.

The play is amazingly bright, intensely interesting and full of novelty. There is laughter in plenty in it. The many quaint types one finds in such localities, colored cabaret entertainers and a grotesque jazz orchestra provides oodles of fun. Owing to the extreme length of the performance, the curtain will rise at 8:10 o'clock at night and at 2:15 p. m. at matinees.

The latest golfing garb consists of cream plus-fours, a blue blazer, cream stockings, and blue and white shoes. We understand that even hardened caddies are pleading for smoked glasses.—London Opinion.

Gang Member Is Taken for a Ride

Detroit, Mich.—Irving Shapiro, known to the police for the last three years as an extortionist, racketeer and one of the mainstays of the Purple gang, recently died the gangster's death.

The twenty-five-year-old gunman, expensively and tastefully dressed as was his wont, was "taken for a ride," four bullets fired into his head and neck, and his body dumped into the street as a speeding automobile roared away from the scene.

The shots awakened Albert Rose, 2464 Taylor avenue. As he ran to the front windows of his home, he heard the roar of the killers' car. Directly across the street, slumped beneath the glare of a street light, he saw a body. Rose called the police.

Victim Is Dead.

The gunmen's victim was dead when the police arrived and the body was removed to the morgue. There it was found all the labels and marks of identification had been cut from the victim's clothing. The pockets contained only a $50 bill, a watch and chain. The body was identified as that of Shapiro by Detective Russell McCarty, of the identification bureau, by fingerprints.

The death car was not sighted by Rose. He said it had disappeared when he reached the windows. Edward W. Brown, a private residential policeman, who was patroling his beat along Taylor avenue, told the police he saw the car. It was a large gray touring car, he said, and turned south on La Salle boulevard after going east on Taylor. He could not determine how many men the car contained.

Two theories are advanced by the police in explanation of the slaying. Inspector Fred W. Frahm, head of the homicide squad, believes Shapiro's death may have been in retaliation for the slaying of Sammy Abramson, professional bondsman, last April. Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the crime and bomb squad, believes Shapiro attempted to extort money from some one who proved himself "too hard" to be intimidated.

Shapiro's body was left in the street not far from where Abramson formerly lived. At the time Abramson was slain his home was at 2058 Taylor avenue. To Inspector Frahm this is not a mere coincidence. He believes the scene of Shapiro's slaying was chosen because of its proximity to the former Abramson residence.

Abramson's body was found in an alley at the rear of 6717 Strong avenue April 17. He had been a bootlegger before he became a professional bondsman. He had been arrested 14 times but convicted only once, that being on a federal charge of violating the prohibition law.

Inspector Garvin's theory of the slaying is based on information he said he had received concerning the recent activities of Shapiro and two other members of the Purple gang. Inspector Garvin says these three have been "cutting themselves in" on the profits of blindpigs and recently have been trying to revive the "protection" racket in connection with cleaning and dyeing establishments.

Beginning of the End.

He believes the other two men will be "the next to go." Other police officers expressed the same opinion.

Inspector Garvin sees in the slaying of Shapiro and the recent conviction of four other members of the Purple gang in federal court on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law the "beginning of the end for the Purple gang."

The Purple gang got its name from a Hastings street merchant who called a small group of youths in Detroit's Ghetto "purple" eleven years ago meaning they were prone to commit petty crimes of one sort and another.

The Purple gang that came to be known and feared in Detroit within the last three years was not wholly composed of the group of Hastings street hoodlums, however.

The first act attributed to the Purple gang was the triple slaying of Frank Wright, Reuben Cohen and Joseph Bloom, in March, 1926, in the Miraflores apartments, 106 Alexandrine avenue east. They were mowed down by machine gun fire. It was the first time machine guns had been used in Detroit crimes.

Plan Memorial to Mary Ann Rutledge

Des Moines.—A campaign to raise funds for a memorial to mark the grave of Mary Ann Rutledge, mother of Abraham Lincoln's sweetheart, Ann Rutledge, is now being considered by the historical, memorial and art department of the state of Iowa.

Her body lies in an almost forgotten cemetery in Jefferson county, Iowa, near the small town of Birmingham. It was here that she spent the last years of her life, a life made sad by the unhappy romance of her daughter.

Aged Man Gets Wish to Sleep and Never Waken

Evansville, Ind.—"I want to sleep and never waken," William H. Blackman, ninety-four years old, told his daughter, Mrs. William B. Wheaton, and shortly afterwards closed his eyes and realized his wish. He was the last surviving member of a band of English settlers who settled here in the early fifties. On the same ship came Elizabeth Sutton, whom he later married.

ALIENS SMUGGLED BY AIR TAKEN BY BORDER PATROL

Traffic at Detroit Discouraged by Activity of Immigration Service.

Detroit, Mich.—A party of aliens, including an eight-months-old baby, who were smuggled into this country by airplane were apprehended recently by the Roseville police, and five others who tried the more common method of crossing the Detroit river by boat were picked up by the immigration border patrol.

Peter Kommer, twenty-six years old, his wife, Magdalene, twenty-two years old, and their infant daughter, Anna, were arrested by Patrolmen John Lanox and Theodore Mesle of Roseville, as they crouched by the side of the road at Gratiot airport waiting for a man to come for them in an automobile. They are Rumanians.

They had just been landed at the airport by a gray airplane. The pilot landed in the far corner of the field, and after directing the aliens where to go he reported to the office of the field that he had made a forced landing because of a broken gas line.

The Roseville police turned the family over to John L. Zurbrick, district director of immigration. The father is being held at the Wayne county jail, and the mother and daughter at the Women's Detention home. It is the first time in two years that a case of airplane alien smuggling has been discovered, according to the officials. Members of the immigration border patrol are seeking the pilot, who abandoned his plane.

The other five aliens, also Rumanians, were apprehended by Immigration Inspectors R. S. Beaver, John Farnell, and Christopher J. Leason on the shore of the Huron river near United States highway No. 25.

The inspectors saw a boat with several passengers in the river, and later found two men hiding in the weeds along the bank, who said they were waiting for two other men to come for them in a rowboat. The boat and its two occupants were located later, and the wife of one of the men was discovered asleep in an automobile parked nearby.

David Balo, one of the men found hiding in the weeds, was arrested as the alleged smuggler. The others were Joseph Kozolo and his wife, Catherine, John Kosti, and Julius Pavelo.

MANCHURIA

Bridge of Chinese Eastern Railway Over the Sungari.

MANCHURIA, whose important east-west railway, the Chinese Eastern, has been the bone of contention between China and Russia, is an empire in itself. The state of Texas along with New York and Pennsylvania might be fitted into Manchuria and still leave enough room for New Jersey. In this domain of vast size is a mixed population of Chinese, Koreans, Japanese and Russians which numbers between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000. So near to China's swarming deltas and Japan's overcrowded islands, it is still a land of great open spaces. This is significant fact in Manchuria politics. For a while Japan and China competed by sending in streams of immigrants; but in late years the Chinese stream has become dominant owing to its lower scale of living.

This northern dependency of China is shaped like a giant jaw tooth whose roots touch the Great Wall where it reaches the sea and whose crown forms the south bank of the Amur river. This tooth is the wedge which separates Russia and Mongolia on the one side and Japanese Korea and the narrow strip of Russian territory along the Sea of Japan on the other. It is a land where empires meet, and, having met, build railroads.

Manchuria is better served in the matter of railway lines than any other part of China. After the treaty of Portsmouth, which ended the Russo-Japanese war, the railways were divided. Japan took over matters in the root of the tooth and Russia those in the crown. So it stood until a few weeks ago when the Chinese ousted Russian railway officials and seized the line. Japan still maintains her own rights in the leased territory surrounding Port Arthur and Dairen and along the railway concession running north almost to Harbin.

Dairen, Manchuria's chief seaport, has been largely Japanese built and resembles other cities of Japan except that it is worked out on a more modern and magnificent scale. Its docks and harbor equipment are comparable with the great seaports of the world.

Harbin, the metropolis of the north, is purely Russian. It lies on the banks of the Sungari river at the point of change from trans-Siberian trains to the southern connections with Peiping and Tokyo. Harbin now shelters great numbers of exiles from the old regime in Russia.

Mukden the Focal Point.

Mukden, the provincial capital, lies in the plains of central Manchuria and is the focal point of three empires. Here the Chinese and Japanese and Europeans each have their distinct cities, three in one. Modern Japanese business and residential blocks surround the railway station where the traveler from Chosen (Korea) or Peiping alights. A disreputable vehicle with lines reminiscent of old Russia bears the tourist through a straggling European quarter to the gates of the high-walled Chinese city two miles away. Japanese, Russians and Chinese meet but do not mingle.

The Japanese quarter is a splendid example of colonial efficiency. Streets are straight, broad and hard paved. Bazaars are filled with the latest products from Japanese farms and factories—luscious yellow persimmons, dainty tea sets, and gorgeous flowered cotton kimono cloth done up in one-garment bolts. There are hospitals, schools and police stations, electric lighted and presided over by the latest products of the imperial educational system. Over the railway station is an excellent European style hotel, complete with brass beds and tile baths.

A short drive in the rickety Russian droskie and all is changed. The air grows heavier with strange odors. Gray brick Russian houses straggle along a bumpy road bordered by open drains, with millet and sweet potato fields stretching beyond. Occasional recently built Chinese structures give the appearance of new patches on an ancient garment.

This is the so-called international settlement and is well named. Wretched looking white Russian refugees abound. Korean women smoke their pipes in half-open doorways. Occasionally European consular compounds form islands of respectability; the American consulate, occupying a series of large and gaudy temple buildings, being particularly imposing, while a stately Georgian structure upholds the dignity of Great Britain.

Suddenly the carriage winds through a towered and tortuously curved gateway in the wall of the Chinese city. Uneasy smells increase into a distinct malodorous certainty. One-storied gray brick, gray tiled houses line a deeply rutted roadway. Blue cotton clothes are worn with the monotony of uniforms. Cheerful, unwashed yellow faces flow past in continuous streams. Perpetual and strident bargaining fills the air. Coal balls, sweet cakes, fly swatters and boiling tea water are hawked with shrill cries and ringing bells.

Given Up to Trade.

Such is the ancient Manchu capital from which the dynastic throne was moved to Peiping in the Seventeenth century, after the Manchu conquest of China. The huge palace of the successors of Genghis Khan still dominates the city with its gaudy emptiness, and tombs of Manchu rulers with columned halls and curving eves brood in lonely magnificence in forests outside the city walls.

These few heirlooms from a historic past lie like soiled jewels in the mud-colored monotony of a dirty commercial city. Modern Mukden is wholly absorbed in trade. Lying in the center of a rich agricultural plain, it forms the meeting point of two great railway systems. One, running east and west, connects Tokyo and Chosen (Korea) with Peiping; the other north and south joins Port Arthur and Dairen to the Trans-Siberian railway. A monument to its commercial importance as well as to fallen soldiers is the modest war memorial of the Japanese heroes who fell in the historic battle of Mukden during the Russo-Japanese war.

Although in the same latitude as Chicago and Boston, Mukden has a rather severe climate of the so-called "continental" type. Winters are long and cold; summers short but torrid. The hot season, however, ripens surrounding miles of beans and giant sorghum, making Mukden the bean cake and bean oil market as well as the alcohol distilling center of North China. Cold winters bring a season of intense activity in the fur market. Buyers from the New York fur houses bargain with traders from the North for all sizes and grades of skins from dog to marten and from Siberian squirrel to Manchurian tiger.

Surrounding coal mines furnish abundant supplies for a bustling railway center. On the other hand water is comparatively scarce for a large part of the year. The relative disproportion between these two elements is probably responsible for the grimy complexion of Manchuria's somber but seething capital.

Land of the Soy Bean.

Manchuria, like new England, is the land of the bean, this time the soy bean. Beans, bean oil, and bean cake, or leavings from the oil presses, are chief exports.

The soy bean's rise from obscurity, only 20 years ago, to its present importance, is a wonder of modern commerce. Today its products, manufactured by the wholesale at Mukden, are shipped all over the world. Not only does the soy bean provide a sauce which is the worcestershire of China, but it also masquerades as cheese, candy, fertilizer, flour, and oil for lighting and lubricating.

The Japanese use it widely as the basis of confectionery. In this form it is highly palatable and the Japanese consider their candies and pastries more wholesome than ours—indeed they are appalled by the quantity of sugar which Americans consume.

Dairen, just north of Port Arthur, on the Liaotung peninsula, exported in one year nearly 150,000 tons of bean oil, and most of this came direct to the United States. Many of the ultimate consumers thereof probably were no more aware that soy bean oil was the basis of a delicious mayonnaise dressing than that hair-seal oil was an important ingredient of the bonbons they ate after dinner.

The region generally referred to as Manchuria really comprises three provinces of China, which are Tsitsikhar, Kirin and Liaotung. The latter, which also is known as Shing-King or Fengtien, is the most southerly and gives its name to the peninsula where Port Arthur and the Japanese reservation are located. It was here that the encroachments of Russia, in 1898, brought on her war with Japan.

Chinese in Manchuria are, as a rule, not native sons. They have immigrated hither from all parts of China, driven from their homes by war and famine. The recent shortage of food and political turmoil in Shantung have sent millions of farmers and laborers from that province alone.

NAVAL OFFICERS QUIT

American naval officers are leaving the service faster than the Naval Academy can replace them, according to recent reports from official sources ninety-nine having been separated from the line of the Navy during the first seven months of 1929, of which eighty-two resigned and nineteen were placed on the retired list. These figures do not include losses from the various staff corps.

Among the officers who resigned were a number of the Navy's leading aviation experts, who have found better remuneration and greater opportunities for advancement in civil life.

So serious is the situation regarded by the Navy Department that an inquiry will be made with a view to relieving the situation. It is believed that inadequate pay, poor chances for promotion, and the deprivation of home life are among the causes of dissatisfaction among officers. And, unfortunately for the service, it is the brightest and most capable ones who are leaving it.

Inasmuch as the pay of officers of the lower grades is less than that of a skilled mechanic in civil life, they can hardly be blamed for seeking better opportunities.

A man in Constantinople claims to be 160 years old and says he has lived most of the time on cheese and garlic. A terrible price to pay for longevity.

Sentenced to kiss his wife or go to jail, a Brooklyn man spoiled a good story by kissing the wife.

The term "higher education" also applies to the price of the same.

LABOR DAY

The annual celebration of Labor Day, which fell on September 2 this year, is an event of interest, not only to the hosts of those who toil with their hands, but to the public at large, as the day is generally marked by festivities in which entire communities join, with little regard for class distinctions.

While Labor Day as we know it is of comparatively recent origin, it is a revival, or survival, of the medieval processions of the guilds. In America its formal observance dates only from 1882, when the Knights of Labor first held a large parade in New York. This led to an effort on the part of labor organizations to have a day legally set apart and dedicated to labor each year.

The first law to that effect was passed by the legislature of Colorado on March 15, 1887, several other states taking similar action during the next few years. In 1894 Congress passed a bill making Labor Day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and in Federal offices and establishments throughout the country, since which time it has been adopted by practically all the states.

It is one of the encouraging signs of our time that there exists in America a better understanding among the three great factors in industry—labor, capital and management—than ever before. It is being realized more and more that the interest of any one of these factors should be the interest of all, as each would be impotent without the other two.

While conflicts of more or less importance will inevitably occur in the future, there is little likelihood that the bitter antagonism of the past, so disastrous to all concerned, will ever be revived, except in local and isolated cases.

The gradually diminishing tendency toward violence in labor disputes, and the growing trend toward arbitration and concilation represent one of the most striking evidences that the world is growing better, in respect to industrial relations at least.

STANDARD SEES LIGHT

In deference to public sentiment the Standard Oil Company of California has caused 1,200 of its billboards to be torn down, according to an official announcement, which says in part:

"To permit the defacement and uglification of these highways is to disgust visitors and drive them away, which most certainly is 'bad business.' Any practice which arouses the contempt, anger, or resentment of motorists on the great annual pilgrimage from all parts of the country is detrimental to the state at large. Highway advertising as now practiced in many places has this effect."

It is beginning to dawn upon many billboard advertisers that their highway signs which mar the natural beauty of the countryside are an eyesore and an irritation to the great army of motorists who hold the chief buying power of the nation. Instead of making good will for the advertisers, these signs make bad will, and therefore represent good money worse than wasted from an advertising standpoint.

Executives of the Standard have seen the light, and their example might be followed with profit by others who disfigure the landscape with offensive billboards.

SOME OLD BAND BOYS

The claim to being the oldest musical organization in the United States, both in respect to its continuous existence and the age of its members, is made by the Silver Grey fife and drum corps of Logan, Utah. It is not likely that any will dispute its claims. The present members and their ages are:

Fifers—H. F. Liljenquist, leader, aged 72; Michael Johnson, 74; Julius Sorenson, 74; W. I. Sorenson, 58. Snare drummers—John Johnson, 77; Albert Savage, 76; A. J. Hansey, 58. Bass drummer—Thomas P. Smith, 73. Flag bearer—Uriah Benson, 62.

The organization was formed in 1870, and has maintained a unbroken history during all the fifty-nine years since. John Johnson, the veteran snare drummer, was a charter member.

If all the noise these old boys have made in their time could be turned loose at once it would drown out several Niagaras.

WHY PICK ON PRINTERS?

For some unaccountable reason it seems that printers are about the only business men who are forced to suffer from government competition, both state and national. This in spite of the fact that the very politicians who would perpetuate and extend this injustice owe their own prestige and power largely to the owners of small newspapers who depend on job printing for a considerable part of their revenue.

Why do not these politicians advocate the establishment of all kinds of state and national manufacturing plants? Why pick on the printers?

It appears that China and Russia are just taking a few nibbles to determine whether they will realy relish a war.

Anyway, the radio orator has to quit when his time is up.

FOREST LOSS BY FIRE

Losses by forest fires in northwestern United States and in Canada during recent weeks have taken on the character of a major disaster. From a wide area have come reports of fruitless efforts to check the flames, in which a number of the courageous fire fighters have lost their lives.

Several thousand American troops were called out to aid the forest guards and volunteers who have been fighting a losing battle with the raging flames in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, and as this is writte n the end of the conflagarations is not yet in sight

Unusually dry weather in these sections has caused a fire once started to spread with great rapidity. The careless dropping of a lighted match under such conditions might easily mean the destruction of thousands of acres of valuable timber.

The prevention of forest fires is one of the country's great economic problems at a time when the depletion of timber through ordinary use is causing grave concern. The most distressing feature of the situation is that it seems almost impossible to prevent this appalling annual waste of a great natural resource.

THE PAJAMA FAD

This seasons' pajama fad among men, which was given such an impetus through street appearances in nocturnal garb by Editor Saunders of North Carolina, may be something more than a passing novelty.

We doubt that the actual wearing of night clothes in daytime is likely to become general, even in torrid weather, but the idea of more sensible clothing for men is one which seems bound to become more widespread. Already we have seen a revolt against the stiff-bosomed shirt, the starched collar and the barrel cuff, even though the comfortable suspenders of old have been largely superseded by the often distressing belt.

Certainly there might be devised a species of male garb which would at once fulfill the requirement of neatness combined with comfort. Whether it shall take the form of modified and glorified pajamas, or something entirely different remains to be seen.

But when it arrives it should be welcomed by the long-suffering masculine tribe—if the members thereof have nerve enough to wear it.

ILLITERACY

"The appalling amount of illiteracy in the United States is a challenge to every city and state, and to the Federal government," declares an editorial in the Washington Herald.

"Only by more schools and better schools, by more teachers and better teachers, and by the best compensation for teachers, can the nation give to every child that education to which it is entitled and which it must have to assume the obligations of citizenship.

"A Federal Department of Education is needed, and badly needed, to co-ordinate education throughout the country. It is strange that education, which next to defense is the nation's most vital business, is not even represented in the Cabinet of the Chief Magistrate of the United States.

"Such a department would rescue hundreds of thousands of children and grownups who are now adrift on the sea of ignorance.

"Let the nation 'throw out the lifeline' to these unfortunates."

SMALL TOWN INDUSTRY

In spite of the greater output of manufactured products in recent years, the average manufacturing plant employs fewer workers than in 1925. A rather surprising fact in this connection is that the only gain in industrial wage-earners is found in towns of less than 10,000 population.

The outstanding feature of recent industrial development is the trend of factories to the smaller towns, and away from the congested centers, this being largely due to the fact that 4,000 communities have acquired electrical facilities during the last five years, which enabled them to offer adequate power for factories in addition to better living conditions for the workers. Another advantage is frequently found in their nearness to raw materials, which makes possible economy in transportation.

These and other significant facts concerning small town industry are contained in a recent statement by Silas H. Altorfer, maker of ABC washers, who has given much study to the influences at work for the benefit of the lesser communities.

Today the small town has excellent opportunities for securing new industries in competition with the larger centers, and these opportunities should be embraced by every wide-awake municipality.

A rocking chair marathon was held at Champaign, Ill. The state university there might confer the degree of Master of Oscillation on the winner.

If the rank and file of Russian and Chinese armies ever find out what they are fighting about it will be real news to them.

SURVEY SHOWS ADULTS TO BE BEST STUDENTS

The oft-repeated maxim that you can't teach an old dog new tricks is a fallacy, as far as adult education is concerned. At least that is the conclusion reached by Richard R. Price of the University of Minnesota, who presented a survey on the "Comparative Scholastic Achievement of Resident and Extension Students" this summer at the annual conference of the National University Extension Association held in Austin, Texas.

Although Price, who is director of Minnesota's extension, emphasized the fact that it was unwise to make sweeping generalizations until further studies should be carried on in other universities, he found that certain trends or indications were clearly discernible. These outcomes led him to the following conclusions.

"On the whole extension students and correspondence students are slightly superior to campus students in mental ability and in achievement, but not significantly so."

"It seems quite clear that university extension tends to select from the mature population persons of superior mentality. Maturity and impelling motivation are by no means neglible factors in achievement.

"Within limits, age is no bar to efficient learning. Learning goes faster when there is need of the immediate application of the material learned. The mind is kept active and alert by vigorous and systematic use."

Concurrent with the issuance of the report is the announcement of the University of California Extension Division of the opening of over 200 courses in the San Francisco bay region, in almost every phase of learning. Last year the California Extension reached an enrollment that totaled around 45,000.

TROUBLE APLENTY WHEN BIRDS ROOST ON WIRES

Electric consumers and company linemen in Calveras and Tuolumne counties have had a rather bad time during the past few days, all on account of birds. One night a gobbler on a turkey ranch near Melones picked out the 17,000-volt transmission wires for a roosting place and caused a short circuit, plunging several Calveras county communities into darkness. A few nights later an owl made the same mistake south of Sonora, and that city and neighboring Tuolumne towns were without lights for a time. To add to the trouble the wires fell on a fence, starting a grass fire that burned over about 100 acres.

Dad, too, is due a certificate of convenience and necessity.

SIDELIGHTS

If Mrs. Wilber Hull of Lawrence county, Alabama, were not already married she would probably have no lack of suitors. At a recent demonstration at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn she appeared neatly arayed in a cotton dress for which her cash outlay was only 13 cents.

A new wrinkle in modern farming is to put snakes to work. G. B. Jackson, of Dehli, Cal., has done it with good results. Gophers were playing havoc with his field of alfalfa, when he coralled five gopher snakes and put them to catching gophers. He estimates that the snakes saved him eight tons of hay, worth $112, from one cutting.

Careless drivers are a menace, thinks Saxson Brown, London strong man, whose special stunt is to allow an automobile to be driven over his chest. Recently a driver let the wheels wobble and they went over Brown's neck. Results were not fatal, but the strong man suffered for several days with a painful "sore throat."

Let well enough alone was the advice given by Judge Austin of Toledo, O., to a man who wanted a divorce because his wife spent $25 for a summer outfit of clothes without his permission. "Thank the Lord that you got off so easy," said the judge.

Some folks are never satisfied. P. O. McAllister of Turlock, Cal., complained of hard luck because he caught "only" 102 catfish in two hours on a recent fishing trip on the San Joaquin river. He was peeved because his companion, L. L. McGee, pulled in 136 of the bullheads in the same time.

Figures mean something to Harry Smith of Anaconda, Mont., who was seen tugging industriously at the lever of a fire alarm box. The box was number 31 and Harry insisted on yanking the lever 31 times when he discovered a small blaze on a nearby porch roof.

As a getter of results through its advertising columns the News of Canby, Minn., has set a lively pace. A farmer subscriber bemoaned the lack of rain, and the editor suggested that he advertise for it on a "no cure, no pay" basis. The advertisement was placed; it rained next day, and the farmer cheerfully paid the advertising bill.

As a means of protection in Yellowstone Park, carry sugar instead of a gun. Mr. and Mrs. Sid Collins, traveling through the park with a supply of groceries, were held up by a big bear. A knowing park guard enticed the bear away with lumps of sugar and the travelers proceeded on their way.

REDUCING FIRE WASTE

Teaching carefulness in regard to fire is a never-ending job, in the opinion of C. A. Ludlun, of the National Fire Waste Council.

"It seems to be necessary," he says, "if any impression is to be made, to create, if possible, a habit of caution and carefulness on the part of the individual citizen by constant reiteration and preachment of fire prevention.

"It is admitted and recognized that all fire losses are in the final analysis paid by society and that every fire loss accordingly represents a real loss to society, but the average individual is not much concerned over the final analysis from which he feels himself quite remote.

"Building to resist fire is as important as is the teaching of carefulness, and it should be apparent that all organizations interested in America's fire-safety and the conservation of its created resources should sponsor a safe and sane construction, program that would reflect credit upon community intelligence, and combine their resources and informed knowledge to bring about greater fire resistance in buildings."

STATE'S INDUSTRIES GROW FASTER THAN AGRICULTURE

The great growth of California as a manufacturing state during the past decade is shown in a report just issued by the California Development Association. In 1919 agriculture was the state's leading industry, and produced 46.4 per cent of California's income. By 1927 manufactured products had outstripped agriculture and contributed more than half of the industrial receipts, leaving agriculture to represent less than one-third of the total.

An important part of this industrial expansion was played by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which for many years has followed a policy of continuously extending its gas and electric systems so that communities in its vast territory might attract industries by the guarantee of cheap power and fuel. Natural gas, the company's newest contribution to the San Francisco Bay region and to Central and Northern California, brings with it the assurance of even greater industrial development and consequent gains in population and payrolls.

AMAZING FACTS

When one visualizes a railroad grade crossing accident, is is to see a gigantic speeding locomotive crash into a small automobile, destroying the car and maiming the occupants. But this is not always the case.

Last year more than 25 per cent of all grade crossing accidents resulted from automobiles running into trains, either standing or in motion. The increase in such accidents was several times greater, when compared with 1927, than the increase in accidents caused by trains striking cars.

The public, in spite of intensive accident prevention efforts of different organizations, grows steadily more careless and indifferent to danger.

A little care on the part of the motorists of the country and all, or nearly all, such accidents would be prevented, and thousands of lives be saved each year.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEES' SALE

WHEREAS, on the 13th day of December, 1928, H. E. GRUDE and FRANKIE M. GRUDE, his wife, executed a certain deed of trust wherein they conveyed the real property therein and hereinafter described, to GEORGE M. MITCHELL and THOMAS M. GARDINER, as trustees for Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, a corporation, to secure the payment of a certain promissory note for the sum of Two Thousand Two Hundred Dollars ($2,200.00), with interest thereon, which said deed of trust was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on the 15th day of December, 1928, in Volume 392 of Official Records, at page 52; and

WHEREAS, said H. E. Grude and Frankie M. Grude have made default in the payment of said promissory note and of the obligation secured by said deed of trust and have defaulted under the terms of said deed of trust; and

WHEREAS, in accordance with the terms and under the authority of said deed of trust and the statutes of the State of California in such cases made and provided, and in pursuance of a resolution of the board of directors of said Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, declaring that it had elected its option and declared the entire unpaid principal and all interest due and unpaid on said promissory note forthwith due and payable, notice of such breach or default and of the election of said Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco to sell, or cause to be sold, the real property hereinafter described, to satisfy said obligation and indebtedness, was heretofore, on the 30th day of April, 1929, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 408 of Official Records, at page 255; and

WHEREAS, said Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, in accordance with the terms of said deed of trust and of a resolution of said board of directors, requested and directed said George M. Mitchell and Thomas M. Gardiner, as trustees, under the power and authority conferred upon said trustees by said deed of trust, to sell the real property therein described, and which is hereinafter described, in order to satisfy said indebtedness;

NOW, THEREFORE, pursuant to said application of said Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, and in accordance with the terms of and under the authority conferred by said deed of trust and the statutes of the State of California in such cases made and provided, said George M. Mitchell and Thomas M. Gardiner, trustees, as aforesaid, give notice that on Tuesday, the 17th day of September, 1929, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock P. M. of said day, at the office of Citizens' Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, No. 165 Sutter Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, they will sell, at public auction, for gold coin of the United States, to the highest bidder, that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate in the City of San Bruno, County of San Mateo, State of California, and described as follows:

Lots numbered forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) in Block numbered five (5) as shown on that certain map entitled "Map of the First Addition to Huntington Park," filed in the office of the County Recorder of San Mateo County November 1, 1907, in Book 5 of Maps at page 40 thereof.

TERMS: Gold coin of the United States, 10% payable to the undersigned at fall of the hammer, balance upon delivery of deed; and, if not so paid, then the 10% to be forfeited and the sale to be void, ten (10) days being allowed for examination of title; taxes to be prorated; instruments to be at the expense of the purchaser.

DATED: San Francisco, California, August 14th, 1929.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Twenty-four members of the Geophysical Research Corporation will make a six months' survey of oil in Fresno county.

The Interstate Commerce Commission denied the application of the Turlock & Eastern Railway Company to build a five-mile line from Turlock to Cortez, at which point the Santa Fe touches.

Mayor Leymel proposes to make better shots of Fresno policemen. He is completing plans for a police pistol range near the city where local officers can increase their efficiency through daily practice.

Construction of the Yreka Railroad Company extension from Yreka into Fort Jones and Etna, in Scott Valley, will begin on October 1, it has been announced. The work will continue all winter.

Modestans are looking forward to the 1930 census. Estimates of the population vary from 15,000 to 18,000. According to the telephone company the population is 15, 300. The Chamber of Commerce claims 18,500, while a recent survey decided the population was approximately 14, 900.

Fresno's building program for August will amount to more than $250,000. Two plants to handle export business, a packing house, a drive-in market, a tire service and warehouse structure, and several other structures will be completed this month.

The proposed bond issue for the new junior high school in Valejo will be for $300,000. The new schoolhouse is badly needed. Enrollment broke all records, when 3006 students reported at the nine schools. There was a gain of 136 students—3142 in all.

Franchises to build natural gas transmission lines in Stanislaus county have been sold to the Western Natural Gas Company and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. The Western company paid $200 for the franchise, the county to pay the printing bills, while the P. G. & E. paid $100 and will pay the printing bills advertising the franchise for sale.

As the result of an addition of 12,340 books during the fiscal year just closed, the Yolo county library now possesses 109,846 volumes. The year represents the greatest period of expansion in the history of the library says the report of Miss Nancy C. Laugenour, librarian. Borrowers total 9532, an increase over last year of 409. There are twenty-eight county branches and thirty-seven school branches.

Program plans for the aerial show to be held at Newman September 28 and 29 are being arranged at general committee meetings. Lieut. Robert Rideout, program chairman, announced that hundreds of large colored posters will be distributed throughout the state within the near future, inviting California airmen to participate. The air show committee is in charge of A. A. Clark. More than $3000 has already been pledged for the guarantee fund of the air circus.

California's co-operation in a proposed ship canal for ocean going vessels from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic through the St. Lawrence river probably will be asked, University of California officials have learned. Charles P. Craig, executive secretary of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, will visit California on behalf of the canal project. He will specially attempt to interest departments of geography, engineering and economics of the university, it is announced.

Plans are being completed for an outdoor theatre to be erected at Roosevelt Grove, according to officials of the Roosevelt-Glen Amphitheater Association, which has numbers of prominent citizens as members. The amphitheater will be of concrete and will be equipped for the dramas, concerts, oratorios and similar events. It will seat 3000, as originally designed, 7000 more seats being planned later.

California parks, still facing development under the $12,000,000 matched state bond plan, are growing in popularity every day, Director of Natural Resources Fred G. Stevenot reports. Revealing a count of visitors visiting some of the chief natural beauty spots, Stevenot said that California Redwood Park in Santa Cruz led all others for popularity, and now is attracting an average of 1182 visitors daily. Its nearest competitor is Bidwell Park Chico, where fifty-four tourists come daily during summer months.

Construction of a new $500,000 hotel for San Jose will start immediately, according to A. J. Hart, president of the Hotel Association. Hart announced the hotel would be of ten stories, with a walled-in Spanish garden and a garage for 100 automobiles as features. It will be at Santa Clara street and Notre Dame avenue. The lease for the hotel has already been let, according to Hart, to a concern that agrees to equip the hotel with $85,000 worth of fixtures.

Plans to construct the first feeder line to the proposed Great Northern-Western Pacific link in California were revealed in an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission, jointly filed by the two railroads. Authority is asked to build a railroad thirty-six miles long, through timber country in Modoc and Siskiyou counties. The feeder line would start from a point near Lookout, on the proposed Great Northern extension into this state, and would extend to Hambone on the McCloud River Railroad.

The Merced Merchants' Association endorsed plans for a two-day roundup and rodeo in the Bear Creek park at Merced, September 14 and 15.

Assessed valuation of Ontario property has increased a million dollars in the past year, county auditor figures reveal.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company will immediately expend $35,000 on new independent power lines to Agnew and Santa Clara.

The new state prison for first offenders and a new state hospital for the insane will probably be located in Orange county, Governor C. C. Young had indicated in an address at Santa Ana.

Smoking among the inmates of the Sonoma State Home is now prohibited. The ban has been placed as a result of the incendiary fire recently which caused damage amounting to $100,000.

A petition to close its agencies at Corte Madera, Ross and Kentfield, in Marin county, has been filed with the Railroad Commission by the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company. Lack of revenue is given at the reason.

Vigorously protesting the removal of a station agent at the Kentfield station, the Kentfield Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution to present petitions to the California State Railroad Commission objecting the change.

A state advisory committee on aeronautical education in California secondary schools was named by Superintendent of Public Instruction Vierling Kersey. The committee personnel represents universities, junior colleges, high schools, labor, aeronautical and business interests of the state and of the army and navy.

Furthering California's highway system through the northwestern part of the state to the Oregon line, the Department of Public Works had announced award of contract for paving 14.9 miles from Orick to the north Humboldt county line. The work will be done by the Heafey-Moore Company of Oakland for $62,445, and will consist of laying bituminous macadam twenty feet wide over an existing surface of crushed rock.

Pigeon races for young birds, ranging from 100 to 200 miles, will be held soon under the direction of the Central California Concourse Association, according to Joseph Brum, secretary. Starting points have been selected at Colfax, Truckee, Reno and Hazen. Brum said that several champions are expected to be developed from the events.

W. L. Johns, faculty member of the Chico State Teachers' College and president of the Northern California School of Aeronautics, has been granted permission to test a field in the rear of the Chico High School as a landing field, and directors of the Chamber of Commerce are working for the establishment of a municipal ariport.

Members of the San Leandro Post of the American Legion are to have a 50-acre duck preserve near Brentwood at their disposal, according to Post Commander Douglas McCormack. The property was purchased recently by the Legion post, and a clubhouse is soon to be erected on it. Other East Bay posts may be invited to participate in the project McCormack said.

General Petroleum, which sought to test out a vast acreage near Delano for oil reserves, has temporarily left the potential field because land owners have looked with disapproval on the plan of testing for hidden anticlines by blasting. Under the new Kern county ordinance, permission of land owners must be secured for a given radius, and this not being forthcoming, the company has deemed it wise at this time to drill for oil without the blast experiments.

Seventeen mining claims in the Silver Lake mining district were filed in the office of County Recorder Thomas M. Ryan recenty by Warren Barney, Auzrey A. Barney, Vester E. Barney, Alfred Barney, Altie M. Van Sickle and Harry Van Sickle. The claims are all in the territory between the lake and the Mokelumne river and contain approximately 150 acres.

Members of the board of school trustees of Alvarado announced that approximately $3000 worth of improvements would be made at the grammar school. The work will include high steel and wire fences, new sewing machines for the domestic science class, playground equipment and improvements, instruments for the school orchestra, according to report.

Shorter hours of labor and a nationwide road building program to give work to the jobless are advocated by the Pacific State Conference on Unemployment as a result of its recent meeting at Sacramento under the sponsorship of James Eads How, so-called "millionaire hobo.." The organization passed a resolution urging that Congress appropriate $3,000,000,000 to launch highway projects which would assure employment for men out of work throughout the country. It also argued that the problems of crime would be reduced through a shorter working day, giving work to more people.

Reflecting a healthy building boom in most sections of the state, Charles A. Whitmore, newly named state building and loan commissioner, announced that twenty-four new building and loan associations have been formed in the last year. Assets of the state's building and loan associations jumped more than $100,000,000 during the year, Whitmore said, now standing at approximately $500,000,000. Headquarters of Whitmore's department will remain in San Francisco, he said, but he will spend two-thirds of his time in southern California.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

BROWNIELAND

The Brownies, Gnomes, Oaf family, Bogey family, Elves, Fairies and Goblins were all having a most exciting time.

Such a Jolly Bonfire.

They had heard that Witty Witch and old Mr. Giant were burning up all the dunce caps that had ever been made.

"Tell us about what you are doing," they said, as they all arrived to visit Old Mr. Giant and Witty Witch.

"We have been going all around finding every dunce cap we could and burning it up.

"You see they were used in olden times when it was thought children had been stupid.

"Now we have discovered that one person may be stupid at one thing and not at another, and we don't think dunce caps are fair.

"There are not many around now and we are thankful for that.

"But we wanted to be sure they were all destroyed so we have been doing this.

"We have had such a jolly bonfire. It has kept us warm and it has made us glow with the feeling that all those horrid things were burnt up.

"Oh, it has been such fun."

All of the Fairies and Brownies and the others were delighted, and they told Witty Witch and old Mr. Giant how fine it had been of them to do all this.

"Now," said old Mr. Giant, "we have some of the glow from our bonfire so we are going to roast chestnuts."

So they had a chestnut roasting time and they did enjoy themselves so much.

They told stories, they sang and they danced, and they played games.

Witty Witch gave them a most excellent supper of all sorts of goodies, in addition to the roasted chestnuts.

And after the supper was over old Mr. Moon came out and looked at them and said:

"Quite a party, eh?"

"Yes, Mr. Moon," they answered "and we have been burning dunce caps."

"What are they?" Mr. Moon asked, and they told him.

"I never had to wear one," said Mr. Moon, and they all laughed, for the thought of the moon with a dunce cap was indeed a funny one.

"We hope no one will ever have to wear one, for we think it is mean to single out anyone for wearing a dunce cap," Witty Witch said.

After the party was over they all went back to Brownieland and Billie Brownie and his brother performed some of the most marvelous tricks you ever saw in all your life.

Even the Moon was very much impressed, and you know that is a great compliment for the Moon has had a long life in which to look down upon many wonders.

Most Marvelous Tricks.

They turned splendid somersaults, and did more tricks than even you would see in a circus.

It was very late when the party broke up in Brownieland and how happy every one was.

It was just the nicest afternoon and evening that had been had in a long, long time.

Don't you think it sounds as though it had been very, very nice?

Lucky Black Cat

Two balls of black wool, one a little larger than the other, form the basis of a novel, home-made black cat. Fix the two together, the smaller on the larger, by means of a needle and black wool, and you have the body arranged. Loops of wool on either side of the small ball will serve for ears, a boot button for nose, green beads for eyes, a stitch or two for the mouth, and loose ends for whiskers. Two small pieces of cardboard covered with wool, and fixed on for paws and a plait of wool for a tail, serve to construct a simple but attractive and lovable mascot.

A Magic Letter

Have you ever heard a cat speak? No. Well, I can tell you of a magic letter that can make a cat speak.

It is the letter H. For you see H makes cat chat.

TENNIS IS SPORT, SAYS HELEN WILLS

Always to Be of Secondary Importance to Her.

Tennis has made Helen Wills one of the most famous women in the world today, but tennis, she said always has been and always will continue to be a matter of only secondary importance in her life.

"I don't know how my life looks to other people," she said, "but I've never let tennis be the thing that mattered most. You can't do that. Tennis is lots of fun—but it's only a sport."

If you don't think Helen Wills meant that, read what happened to her in New York and her reaction to it.

When she came in on the Aquitania, winner for the third successive year of the Wimbledon championship, thirty news cameramen and a big crowd of reporters boarded the ship at quarantine to take pictures of her and interview her.

After the ship docked, one of the ship reporters hurried to a telephone and in his story, quoted Miss Wills as having said she doubted if she ever would play tennis in Europe again. The story went out, and during the afternoon reporters began to flock into her hotel to find out why.

"Somebody must have misunderstood me," she said amiably, when she had found out what the excitement was all about.

"After all, that would be natural enough; there were lots of people around and quite a bit of confusion.

Helen Wills.

What I meant to convey was that I didn't know whether I'd go back next year or not—that I'd made no plans.

"As a matter of fact, I've never made plans very far ahead about going to Europe to play tennis. I'd love to go over and play again next year, but I'm not able to say right now whether I can or not.

"After all (consolingly) don't take all this so seriously. It's only tennis."

Helen Wills loves tennis—as a sideline, but as for the fame it has brought her—

"Oh, that isn't fame," she said hastily. "Not real fame. If I could ever make any important scientific discovery, or become a great artist, or—something like that—well than I might be famous, but tennis.

"Tennis is just a sport—something that's fun. For awhile, since I've been playing tournament tennis, I was going to college, and I made that count more—really mean more to me as a person—than tennis. My drawing means more than tennis to me, too.

"You see, I've got my life ahead of me, and I can't let tennis be the only thing in it—nor the most important thing."

"Perhaps," one reporter suggested, "You may not go to Europe next year because you'll be married by then."

But all that got was a laugh.

SUMMER SWEETS.

We all enjoy good candy. It is one energy producing food and immediately absorbed; so an ideal tidbit to help us over the tired spots.

Atlantic City Salt-Water Taffy.—Mix one cupful of sugar with a tablespoonful of corn starch, add two-thirds of a cupful of corn sirup, one-half cupful of water and a tablespoonful of butter; stir until the boiling point is reached, then boil until a firm ball is made when a drop is tried in cold water. Add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and any desired flavoring, and pour out to cool on a well greased platter. When cold enough to handle, pull until it is smooth and light. One may add the flavoring to it while pulling, and have a variety of flavor. Cut into small bits with the shears, wrap in waxed paper and keep in a cool dry place.

Raisin Fudge.—Cook together two cupfuls of light brown sugar, seven-eighths cupful of thin cream until a little dropped in water will form a firm soft ball. Pour out to cool and when just ready to handle, turn and mold with a large spatula until it gets creamy and begins to get firm, then add the raisins, using one-half cupful chopped fine and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Spread the raisins and press the fudge into a buttered pan to mold. Cut into squares when cold.

Pralines.—These are the delicious bits of sweetness which New Orleans mammies, with their red bandana-bound heads, carry around in baskets to sell everywhere. Boil one pound of dark brown sugar with just enough water to dissolve it until it threads a fine strand when dripped from a fork or spoon. Stir in one pound of shelled pecans and when evenly mixed flavor and drop by spoonfuls onto a marble slab. Flatten and round each one and when cool run the knife under it and wrap in waxed paper. A bit of salt improves the flavor and the finest have no flavor except that of the brown sugar.

Mexican Orange Candy.—Take one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of rich milk, the rind of two oranges, pinch of salt, two cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of pecans. Melt one cupful of sugar, scald the milk, add boiling hot to the caramel and stir until dissolved; now add the two cupfuls of sugar, cook to the soft ball stage, add the butter, grated orange rind and the nuts. Beat until cool.

The Wholesome Date.

Dates are so well liked by everybody that they need no recommendation except to remember that young children and old people who have lost their teeth should not eat them in their natural state. Soften in boiling water and press through a sieve when giving to a year-old child or one who has not good grinding teeth. Uncooked dates cut into small pieces added to a cereal or a sandwich may be given a child after the third birthday. Those troubled with diabetes should not eat dates. For those who enjoy too much sweet, a few dates will satisfy the craving without putting on too much weight.

Date and Celery Sandwiches.—Cut one-half package of dates into slices, five or six crosswise. Cut one-half cupful of celery into fine dice, moisten with cream or salad dressing to bind and use as filling for whole wheat bread.

Date Paste.—This may be prepared and kept for several weeks in the ice box or cold place if packed in a glass-covered jar. Take one package of dates, three-fourths of a cupful of walnuts measured after chopping, one-half pound of figs. Pit the dates, shell the walnuts, chop all through a meat grinder or in a wooden bowl, mix until the figs, dates and nuts are of the consistency to spread by adding cream, orange juice or any other fruit juice at hand. If the paste is to be stored, add only a small amount of water; more of the juices may be added as it is used.

A Pint of Jam.—Take one package of dates, one cupful of cranberries, one pint of water and one-half cupful of sugar. Pit the dates and place them with the water in a saucepan with the chopped cranberries. Cook gently for twenty minutes, stirring often. Add the sugar and cook ten minutes, then place in jars and seal.

Do not fear that a little candy daily will increase your waist measure, for a reasonable amount is necessary for good health.

American Meat Products

When Rabelais described Gargantua's meals, his imagination seemed to outstrip all possibilities. But Uncle Sam's menu would make Gargantua seem an ascetic. Americans last year ate more than 9,000,000,000 pounds of pork, alone. Their total production, not including importation, of dressed meats was 16,955,000,000 pounds.

Grimly the Worm had done his work, but he had hardly reckoned on the strength of this man. With a vast throe of fear he tried to free himself. Tenser, tenser grew the thongs; they strained, they bit into his flesh, but they would not break. Yet as he relaxed it seemed to him they were less tight. He made another giant effort. Once again he felt the thongs strain and strain; then, when he ceased, he imagined they were still looser.

The dogs seemed to have lost all fear. They smelled the blood on his head, and a slaver ran from their jaws. Again he cursed them, but this time they did not move. They seemed to realize he could not harm them.

Again he tried to get free. Now he fancied he could move his arm a little. He must hurry, for every instant the malamutes were growing bolder Another strain and a wrench. Ha! he was able to squeeze his right arm from under the rawhide. Quickly he wrenched out his other arm. He was just in time, for the dogs were upon him.

He struggled to his knees and shielded his head with his arms. Wildly he swung at the nearest dog. Full on the face he struck it, and it shot back as if hit by a bullet. But the others were on him. Two of them were making for his face. As he lay on his back he gripped each by the throat. In his grip of steel they struggled to free themselves in vain. With his huge hands he was choking them, choking them to death, using them as a shield against the other three. Then slowly he worked himself into a sitting position. He hurled one of the dogs to the tent door. He swung bludgeon blows at the others. They fled yelping and howling.

Then he rose and freed himself from the remaining thongs. He was torn and cut and bleeding, but he had triumphed.

"Oh, the devil!" he growled, grinding his teeth. "He's taken everything, the scum! left me to starve. Ha! one thing he's forgotten—the matches. At least I can keep warm."

He picked up the canister of matches and relit the stove.

"I'll kill him for this," he muttered. "Night and day I'll follow him. I'll camp on his trail till I find him. Then —I'll torture him; I'll strip him and leave him naked in the snow."

He slipped into his snowshoes, gave a last look around to see that no food had been left, and with a final growl of fury he started in pursuit.

He had a thought of capturing the dogs and hitching them up; but, thoroughly terrified, they had retreated into the woods. To overtake this man, to glut his lust for revenge, he must depend on his own endurance.

So, with head bowed and shoulders sloping forward, Jack Locasto darted on the track of the Worm.

He came to where the fugitive had made a camp. There were the ashes of a fire.

"Curse him; he's got some matches after all," he said with bitter chagrin. Eagerly he searched all around in the snow to see if he could not find even a crumb of food. There was nothing. He pushed on. Night fell and he was forced to make camp.

Oh, he was hungry! "If I only had a tin to boil water in," he muttered; "there's lots of reindeer moss, and I could stew some of my mucklucks. Ah! I'll try and roast a bit of them."

He cut a strip from the Indian boots he was wearing, and held it over the fire. The hair singed away and the corners crisped and charred. He put it in his mouth. It was pleasantly warm, but even his strong teeth refused to meet in it. However, he tore it into smaller pieces, and bolted them.

At last the dawn came, that evil, sneaking, corpselike dawn, and Locasto flung himself once more on the trail. He was not feeling so fit now. Hunger and loss of blood had weakened him so that his stride insensibly shortened, and his step had lost its spring. However, he plodded on doggedly, an incarnation of vengeance and hate.

Beyond a doubt he was growing weaker. Once or twice he stumbled, and the last time he lay a few moments before rising. He wanted to rest badly. Then night came and he built another giant fire.

Again he bolted down some roasted muckluck. He had to make tremendous efforts to keep from sleeping. Several times he drowsed forward, and almost fell into the fire. At dawn the sky was leaden and the cold less despotic. Stretching interminably ahead was that lonely snowshoe trail. Locasto was puzzled.

"Where in creation is the little devil going to, anyway?" he said, knitting his brows. "I figured he'd make direct for Dawson, but he's either changed his mind or got a wrong steer. By Heavens, that's it—the little varmint's lost his way."

Locasto had an Indian's unerring sense of location.

"I guess I can't afford to follow him any more," he reflected. "I've gone too far already. I'm all petered out. I'll have to let him go in the meantime. It's save yourself, Jack Locasto, while there's yet time. Me for Dawson."

There was a strange stillness in the air, not the natural stillness of the Wild, but an unhealthy one, as of a suspension of something, of a vacuum, of bated breath. It was curiously full of terror. Every second the horizon grew blacker, more bodeful, and Locasto stared at it, with a sudden quake at his heart.

"Blizzard!" he gasped. "I guess I'm done for. But I'll fight to the finish I'll die game." He lowered his head and butted desperately into the heart of the storm. He was faint from lack of food, but despair had given him a new strength, and he plunged through drift and flurry with the fury of a goaded bull. He knew his only plan was to keep moving, to stumble, stagger on. It was a fight for life. He had forgotten his thirst for revenge, forgotten everything but his own dire peril.

"Keep moving, keep moving for God's sake," he urged himself hoarsely. "You'll freeze if you let up a moment. Don't let up, don't!"

But oh, how hard it was not to rest! Every muscle in his body seemed to beg and pray for rest, yet the spirit in him drove them to work anew. He was making a certain mad headway, traveling, always traveling. He doubted not he was doomed, but instinct made him fight on as long as an atom of strength remained.

Where was he going? Maybe round in a circle. He was like an automaton now. He did not think any more, he just kept moving. His feet clumped up and down. He lifted himself out of snowpits; he staggered a few steps, fell, crawled on all fours in the darkness, then in a lull of the furious wind rose once more to his feet. The snow whirled around him in a narrow eddy, and he tried to grope out of it and failed. His feet were frozen; his arms were frozen. Here he would lie down and—quit. It would soon be over, and it was a pleasant death, they said. . . .

Ha! what was that? He fancied he saw a dim glow just ahead. It could not be. He closed his eyes. Then he opened them again—the glow was still there.

Surely it must be real! It was steady. As he fell forward it seemed to grow more bright. On hands and knees he crawled to it. Brighter and brighter it grew. It was but a few feet away. Oh, God! could it be?

Then there was a lull in the storm, and with a final plunge Locasto fell forward, fell toward a lamp lighted in a window, fell against the closed door of a little cabin.

* * * * * * *

The halfbreed and I were paying a visit to Jim in the cabin he had built on Ophir. Jim was busy making ready for his hydraulic work of the coming spring, and once in a while we took a run down to see him He was no longer the cheerful, optimistic Jim of the trail. He had taken to living alone. He had become grim and taciturn. He cared only for his work, and, while he read his Bible more than ever, it was with a growing fondness for the stern old prophets. There was no doubt the North was affecting him strangely.

My mind strayed to other things. Chiefly I thought of Berna, all alone in Dawson. I longed to be back with her again. I thought of Locasto. Where in his wild wanderings had he got to? I thought of Glengyle and Garry. How had he fared after mother died?

Lord! a terrific gust of wind shook the cabin. Then there came a lull, a strange, deep lull, deathlike after the mighty blast. And in the sudden quiet it seemed to me I heard a hollow cry.

"Hist! What was that?" whispered the halfbreed.

Jim, too, was listening intently.

"Seems to me I heard a moan."

Once more we listened intently, holding our breath. There it was again, a low, faint moan.

"It's some one outside," gasped the halfbreed. Horror-stricken, we stared at each other, then he rushed to the door.

"Hurry up, you fellows," he cried; "lend a hand. I think it's a man."

Frantically we pulled it in, an unconscious form that struck a strange chill to our hearts. Anxiously we bent over it.

"He's not dead," said the halfbreed, "only badly frozen, hands and feet and face. Don't take him near the fire."

He had been peering inside the parka hood and suddenly he turned to me.

"Well, I'm darned—it's Locasto."

Locasto! I shrank back and stood there staring blankly. Locasto! All the old hate resurged into my heart. Many a time had I wished him dead; and even dying, never could I have forgiven him. As I would have shrank from a reptile, I drew back.

"No, no," I said hoarsely, "I won't touch him. Curse him! He can die."

"Come on there," said Jim fiercely. "You wouldn't let a man die, would you? There's the brand of a dog on you if you do. It don't matter what wrong he's done you, it's your duty as a man to help him. Come on. Get these mits off his hands."

Mechanically I obeyed him. It was as if I was impelled by a stronger will than my own. I began pulling off the mits. The man's hands were white as putty. I slit the sleeves and saw that the awful whiteness went clear up the arm. It was horrible. Tearing off his clothing we laid him on the bed, and forced some brandy between his lips.

He moaned and opened his eyes in a wild gaze. He did not know us. He was still fighting the blizzard.

"Keep a-going, keep a-going," he panted.

"Keep that bucket a-going," said the halfbreed. "We've got to thaw him out."

Then for this man began a night of agony, such as few have endured. We lifted him onto a chair and put one of those clay-cold feet into the water. At the contact he screamed, and I could see ice crystalize on the edge of the bucket. I had forgotten my hatred of the man. I only thought of those frozen hands and feet, and how to get life into them once more. Our struggle began.

In a terrible spasm of agony Locasto threw us off. We grasped him. He fought like a demon. He was cursing us, praying us to leave him alone, raving, shrieking. Grimly we held on, yet, all three, it was as much as we could do to keep him down.

It was hard, but keep him down we did; though his cries of anguish deafened us through that awful night, and our muscles knotted as we gripped. Hour after hour we held him, plunging now a hand, now a foot in the ice water, and holding it there. How long he fought! How strong he was! But the time came when he could fight no more. He was like a child in our hands.

There, at last it was done. We wrapped the tender flesh in pieces of blanket. We laid him moaning on the bed.

Next morning he was still unconscious. He suffered intense pain, so that Jim or the halfbreed had to be ever by him. I, for my part, refused to go near. Indeed, I watched with a growing hatred his recovery. I wished he had died.

At last he opened his eyes, and feebly he asked where he was. After the halfbreed had told him, he lay silent awhile.

"I've had a close call," he groaned. Then he went on triumphantly: "I guess the Wild hasn't got the bulge on me yet. I can give it another round."

He began to pick up rapidly, and there in that narrow cabin I sat within a few feet of him, and beheld him grow strong again. I suppose my face must have showed my bitter hate. I thought of Berna. Fear and loathing convulsed me, and at times a great rage burned in me so that I was like to kill him.

"Seems to me everything's healing up but that hand," said the halfbreed. "I guess it's too far gone. Gangrene's setting in. Say, Locasto, looks like you'll have to lose it."

Horror crowded into Locasto's eyes "Lose my hand—don't tell me that! Kill me at once! I don't want to be maimed."

He gazed at the discolored flesh Already the stench of him was making us sick, but this hand with its putrid tissues was disgusting to a degree.

Locasto lay staring at it. Then he sighed, and thrust its loathsomeness into our faces.

"Come on," he growled. "Hurry up and get the cursed thing off."

The halfbreed nicked the flesh down to the bone, then with a ragged jackknife he began to saw. I could not bear to look. It made me deathly sick. I heard the grit, grit of the jagged blade. I will remember the sound to my dying day. How long it seemed to take! No man could stand such torture. A groan burst from Locasto's lips. He fell back on the bed. He fainted.

Quickly the halfbreed finished his work. The hand dropped on the floor. He pulled down the flaps of skin and sewed them together.

"How's that for home-made surgery?" he chuckled. He took the severed hand upon a shovel and, going to the door, he threw it far out into the darkness.

Spring with its thaw was upon us. With a curious fascination, I gazed down at the mighty river. Surely the ice could not hold much longer. It was patchy, netted with cracks, heaved up in ridges, mottled with slushy pools, corroded to the bottom. Decidedly it was rotten. On every lip was the question—"The ice—when will it go out?" For to these exiles of the North, after eight months of isolation, the sight of open water would be like heaven. It would mean boats, freedom, friendly faces, and a step nearer to that "Outside" of their dreams.

How clear the air was! Sounds came up to me with marvelous distinctness. Summer was coming, and with it the assurance of a new peace. Down there I could see our home, and on its veranda, hammock-swung, the white figure of Berna. How precious she was to me! How anxiously I watched over her!

Sometimes it was the very intensity of my love that made me fear; so that in the ecstasy of a moment I would catch my breadth and wonder if it all could last. And always the memory of Locasto was a sinister shadow. He had gone "Outside," terribly broken in health, gone cursing me hoarsely and vowing he would return. Would he?

* * * * * * *

The waters were wild with joy. From the mountain snows the sun had set them free. Down hill and dale they sparkled, trickling from boulders, dripping from mossy crannies, rioting in narrow runlets. Then, leaping and laughing in a mad ecstasy of freedom, they dashed into the dam.

Here was something they did not understand, some contrivance of the tyrant Man to curb them, to harness them, to make them his slaves. The waters were angry. They chafed against their prison walls, they licked and lapped at the stolid bank. Higher and higher they mounted, growing stronger with every leap. More and more bitterly they fretted at their durance. Behind them other waters were pressing, just as eager to escape as they. Something must happen.

The "something" was a man He raised the floodgate, and there at last was a way of escape. How joyously the eager waters rushed at it! They surged and swept and roared about the narrow opening.

His Beard Too Close When Tire Blew Out

Probably the first man to devise a fluid to make automobile tires puncture proof was A. L. Dyke of St. Louis, a pioneer in the automobile industry.

The earliest automobiles had single-tube tires, made by bicycle tire manufacturers and glued to the rims of the wheels. They punctured with ease and frequency. When that happened it was necessary to stop, pry off the glued tire, stick rubber bands in the hole and glue them there, put the tire back, glue it to the rim and wait for the glue to dry.

Dyke brought out a sticky substance that could be squirted into a tire in place of air. But an Illinois physician, who wore a beard, was inspecting a tire thus filled when it blew out. He threatened to sue Dyke for the loss of his beard, for it had to be shaved off.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Hector's Really Bright Solution Didn't Solve

Hector had never done a stroke of work in his life. As his private means were not very large, Grace was considerably surprised when he invited her to marry him.

"How in the world are we going to live?" she asked.

The question did not trouble Hector.

"Oh, with your people!" he said, in a bored voice.

But Grace shook her head.

"I'm afraid that idea is no good," she replied without more ado.

The monocle dropped with a tinkle out of Hector's eye, and a disconcerted look came over his face.

"Why not?" he demanded.

Grace smiled sadly.

"Because my people are still living with their people," she explained.—London Answers.

"You have to meet whisper with whisper."

McCabe G. Winslow, the Denver prohibition leader, was defending whispering campaigns.

"It's like the case of the crook," he went on. "A crook, you know, consulted a lawyer, told him what he'd done, and promised him $2,000 for an acquittal. The lawyer said:

"'You've committed a crime, no doubt about that. I can get you off, though. Get some witnesses, and I'll get you off.'

"The crook got some witnesses, and the lawyer got him off.

"'And now,' he said—'now that I've won your case for you, how about the $2,000?'

"'That's all right,' said the crook, 'Get some witnesses.'"

Miniature Cow

What is supposed to be the world's smallest cow, Daisy, was recently on exhibition at the Rand show, South Africa. The little mite, who was born from ordinary parents in far-away Buenos Aires (South America), is 5½ years old, stands only a few inches high, and weighs in the vicinity of about 40 pounds. She is absolutely perfect in every detail, she is insured with Lloyds for $25,000, and her carcass will be presented to the British museum after death.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptional product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Lawrence Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kennedy, of Mission street, suffered a broken nose on Sunday of last week while playing baseball at the Ocean View baseball park. He was playing catches on the sidelines when the ball, failing to reach him, bounced on the ground before him and up again, hitting and breaking his nose.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Fellows, Dr. and Mrs. F. P. Callsen, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Trier and Mrs. H. H. Smith motored to Walters Springs last Saturday, where they joined Mayor H. H. Smith, who has been spending the past ten days at the Springs. The happy group returned home Tuesday morning, leaving the Mayor to finish his vacation.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Company No. 4 resumed their meetings last Thursday evening in the fire house on Peoria street, after a two months vacation. The ladies are making plans for a whist party to be held in the fire house in the near future. These parties are always very enjoyable and looked forward to with much pleasure. As usual home made cake and coffee will be served. Mrs. Flora Foppiano, president of the Auxiliary, presided and Mrs. A. Vireno and Mrs. J. Viotti were hostesses for the evening.

Tom Ayer, of Westlake avenue Bill Zettle and W. Johnson motored to Madrone Springs over last week end, where they went deer hunting. Although Mr. Ayer was not fortunate enough this time to bring home a deer, he is happy over the fact that the deer he killed at Madrone Springs the opening of the season, when he spent two weeks there with Mrs. Ayer and their son Gone, was such a beauty that Mrs. Ayer insisted on having the head mounted and it is the admiration of all who see it.

Richard Hutchings, little son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hutchings, of Vista Grande avenue, was guest of honor at a birthday party given by his mother in observance of his seventh birthday last Wednesday afternoon. The children had a delightful time playing games, after which dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Patricia Callan, Viola, Grace and Josephine Dillon, Betty E. Baldocchi, Dolly Seola, Elenor Hutchings, Billy Bernzott, Richard and Harold Hutchings, Martin, Alfred and Bobbie Baldocchi, Matthew Callan, Miss Frances Greget, Mrs. Alfred Baldocchi, Sr., Mrs. James Dillon, Mrs. William Bernzott, of San Jose, Mrs. S. Glos, Mrs. H. Hutchings, Sr., and Mrs. H. Hutchings, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Waterman, of Acton street, entertained a large group of relatives last Monday, the occasion being a family reunion in honor of Mrs. Waterman's brother, wife and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kramer and daughters Mary Evelyn, Gladys, Lucile and Romona Louise, who arrived Monday from Africa, after an absence of eighteen years. Besides the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Waterman had as their guests Mrs. A. Forster and daughter Elizabeth, of Los Angeles, Mrs. George Kramer, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. G. Kramer and daughters Myrtle and Grace, of San Francisco, Mrs. Bangham and daughters, Mrs. R. Paine and Miss Romona Bangham, of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Bangham and sons Rodney and Laraby, of Albany, and Miss M. Schick, of San Francisco.

Aaron Barskey, of Santa Barbara avenue, spent the past week at Del Monte, where he attended the golf tournament.

Mrs. T. Ayer and son Gene, of Westlake avenue, motored with friends last Saturday to Marysvale, where they spent the week end.

The friends of Mrs. Dave Campbell, of Santa Cruz avenue, are happy to hear she is greatly improved after being on the sick list for the past week.

Mrs. M. Farmar and little son, of Evergreen avenue, motored to Los Gatos last Wednesday with a group of relatives, where they spent a delightful day.

A stereopticon lecture on Brazil will be given in the Presbyterian church next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, to which the public is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Les Ayer, of Los Banos avenue, motored to San Jose last Saturday, where they spent the week end visiting Mrs. Ayres' mother, Mrs. Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Larkin and children, Virginia and Fred, Jr., of Niantic avenue, motored to Neptune Beach last Sunday, where they spent a delightful day.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Oakley and daughter Gladys, of Templeton avenue, and the Misses Dorothy and Gladys Eldrup motored to Martin's Beach last Monday, where they visited with friends.

Chief of Police Doyle wishes to warn all motorists that a stop sign does not mean to shift into second, but to come to a complete stop. Observe the rules when you come to the stop signs, and avoid trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Viotti and sons, Raynold and Elmo, of Templeton avenue, Mr. and Mrs. E. De Martini and son Darrel, and Mrs. E. Menconi and daughter Eva motored to Blue Lake last Saturday, where they spent the Labor Day holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Baccigalupi, nee Grace Johnston, of Wilson street, are receiving the congratulations of their many friends upon the birth of a little daughter, born last Tuesday morning at St. Mary's hospital.

C. P. Womack, of Winchester street, returned home on Tuesday of last week after spending the past five months at the Woodmen of the World hospital at San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Womack's many friends are happy to hear he is greatly improved in health.

A study circle has been formed in connection with the Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association, which will be of great interest to any parent, either a member of the P. T. A. or otherwise, who is interested in this line of work. Mrs. C. J. Pauw, of 859 Hanover street, has been appointed chairman of this circle and any information may be obtained by communicating with her.

Mrs. H. Hutchings, of Vista Grande avenue, entertained the members of the sewing club of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. at her home last Tuesday afternoon, having as her guests Mrs. Secor, Mrs. C. Page, Mrs. M. Sherwood, Mrs. E. E. Foss and Mrs. F. Rickmann. The next afternoon of sewing will be held on next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. E. Foss, 123 Los Banos avenue.

Do We Hear a Second

"Life must be terrible with a face like that," murmured the dainty little Wrist Watch to the Alarm Clock.

And Big Ben replied: "Don't fret, little one, I have my moments."

Men do not value a good deed unless it brings a reward.

We carry a complete line of Builders' Hardware.

Abe: "Vot did you name the twins?"

Ike: "The foist ones we called Kate and Duplicate—the second Pete and Repeat; and the new ones Max and Climax."

Abe: "Oi—I hope so."

A bandit walked into the radio broadcasting studio. Waving a pistol in the air he shouted, "I'm a tough guy! I'm going to rob all the men and kiss all the women!" A radio announcer shot the bandit dead. Then the staff soprano shot the announcer.

ABERDEEN and AMERICAN BLOCK —the coal that satisfies.

"How did you find yourself after last night's party?"

"Oh, I just looked under the table, and there I was."

"Let me hold your palmolive?"

"Not on your lifebuoy."

"Guess I'm out of lux."

Suppose our Coal is better suited to your immediate needs. Try us.

That's Different

Head of the House, in angry tones: "Who told you to put that paper on the wall?"

Decorator: "Your wife, sir."

"Pretty, isn't it?"

It may seem foolish to buy coal during this hot weather, but not so, brother! You'll need it soon, and now is the time to buy.

SHINGLES — All grades and kinds.

"I'm the fellow you paid to drown your cat. I'm sorry, but the check you gave me came back."

"So did the cat."
